The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

3,808

The farewells and thrice farewells of Boss Cox and Governor Herrick of Ohio furnish touching literature.

Thomas W. Lawson says: "I never bet," and then proceeds to put up $20,000 of "some clients' money." Every body laughs.

A Vassar college girl was homesick and jumped into a lake; an Exeter academy boy was homesick and jumped into foot ball. As it happened the results were the same.

Apparently the wind still continues to whistle through the walls of the state prison at Windsor, if the story is true that within a week Mary Rogers has sent a letter to a party outside those walls. Plug up the holes, Lovell!

During the year just closed Columbia university in New York received approximately two million dollars in gifts, and yet the institution is running behind its income. It is perhaps significant that the colleges of the country are starting business courses.

The "claw-hammer" coat is being injected into Boston politics, and is stirring up a good deal of discussion among the newspapers. Judge Dewey, a candidate for mayor, has been wearing the coat during his round of campaign addresses. The "claw-hammer" was a novelty in Vermont politics not so very long ago.

Evidences of that rottenness in New York which has been preached and prayed against for years are apparent now in the aftermath of the great election of Tuesday. All law-abiding citizens will express the hope that the rottenness may be cleaned out. That is the reason that Hearst, personally not a strong candidate or man, is receiving hearty support from men of all political beliefs; they would rather have clean elections than especially brilliant officials. And it is a pity that capable candidates have to be carried into office on fraud charges, as is claimed in the election of Tuesday.

TRIPPED BY HIS OWN DULICITY.

The St. Albans city court set a precedent for the Montpelier city court, which has been troubled with the duplicity of "Barre men" and others who give names not their own when brought into court for intoxication. A prominent man living outside of St. Albans remained in his cups so long that he lost control of himself and was arrested. It happened that he was known neither to the officer nor to the judge. The prominent man gave the name of a St. Albans man who, it seems, was also unknown to the court. And what a tangled web he weaved! An event soon to follow tripped him in the meshes of his own deceit. The man who bore the name given in court by the "prominent man" was arrested for intoxication. He was naturally surprised because it really was his first appearance. The court pointed to the records, which unmistakably told that he had been in court for intoxication, and that at a period not so long ago but that the man ought to have remembered. But he finally was able to convince the court that someone else had been using his name, and then no time was lost in summoning the "prominent man" into court. The latter paid roundly for his deceit. A case somewhat analogous came up in the Montpelier city court the other day, when a Barre man gave a name not his own. The name chosen may not have been that of any resident of Barre, we do not know as to that, but it did become known to the prosecuting officer a short time later that a fanciful name was given. It is a more or less slick method of evading publicity and violating some of the features of the liquor law. The charge brought against the perpetrator of the trick in St. Albans was that of hindering and impeding a judicial officer in the execution of his office, as follows: In case he should be arrested again he would escape the second offense charge if he should present his own name, and if the court should not recognize him. Also the court is obliged to present the names of convicted persons to license commissioners to be handed to liquor dealers. If respondents present fictitious names to the court, that officer is therefore hindered in presenting the true names.

SHE WAS IN A HURRY.

A woman came to my house and said she couldn't stay.
Remarked that she was hurried and would have to haste away.
And so, as I'm sagacious, I took my rod and line.
And opined that I'd go fishing, as the day was looking fine.
And I stayed and I stayed till the sun began to set.
Still I stayed and stayed till the sky had turned to jet.
Then I took my rod and line and I sought my home once more—
Do you think the woman'd fitted? She was standing by the door.
Just to talk and to talk and to talk and to talk.
And to talk and to talk. Then I took a little walk.
And when I sought my couch at last, the rest of sleep to get,
She was standing by the door and was talking, talking yet.
I love the tribe of women, and have loved it since a child.
But when one says that she's in haste I want to be excited—
Not very far, but far enough; somewhere in foreign lands;
Perhaps to Madagascar or the hot Sahara's sands—
And when she lifts her alto voice to say: "I cannot stay!"
I wonder where I'd better go to pass the busy day.
Of course she goes—I know she does—exactly to the door;
But there she stops to talk a bit, and then to talk some more;
To talk and talk and talk and talk and talk and talk—
There's not a thing beneath the sun that can talk so fast.
Oh, yes, I love the women, and I ever, ever will;
But I hope for some approval when I say I love them still.

HARVARD RATED 4 TO 1 OVER PENNSYLVANIA

For the Big Contest Between the Two Elevens on Franklin Field This Afternoon—The Line-up.

Philadelphia, Nov. 11.—Trainer Mc-Masters of the Harvard Varsity football eleven, which arrived yesterday to meet Pennsylvania today, reports it to be in prime condition for the contest. The players, accompanied by coaches and athletic officials of Harvard, reached the city shortly before noon, and after luncheon the entire squad went to Franklin Field, where signal practice was had until late in the afternoon. The Pennsylvania team has been resting at Winslow Junction, N. J., about twenty-five miles from this city.

Harvard is picked to win the game, the betting being 2 to 1 on the Crimson team. Notwithstanding the loss of several good men, Pennsylvania expects to give Harvard a hard game and believes that the Cambridge team will not win with the ease that the Harvard followers expect.

With the coming of the Harvard team, the rumors that today's game will be the last the two universities will play together was again revived, but there does not seem to be any present foundation for the report. Athletic officials of the two institutions met officially last evening and there was nothing in evidence to indicate that Harvard and Pennsylvania are about to break athletic relations. Nothing was made public regarding the protest made by Harvard against Lamson, the Pennsylvania tackle, and the incident is believed to be closed.

HELD UP IN DAYLIGHT.

Dover, N. H., Man Tells of His Adventure to the Police.

Dover, N. H., Nov. 11.—Mannell Rogers, aged 25, was held up on Portland street yesterday forenoon at about 11 o'clock by four men and robbed of $3, all the money he had in his possession. Young Rogers in telling of the hold-up said that he had been in Edward Durbin's saloon on Main street to see the captain of a coal barge on which he worked, and while there the captain gave him $3.25. He believes the four men were standing outside of the saloon and saw him receive the money, which he put in his trousers pocket. When he came out of the saloon, he says, he turned the corner at Platts block and started down Portland street.

The four men started after him, and one of them hailing him said: "Hold on there, I want to speak to you."
He says he stopped, and when the man, who he claims, were Welch and Allen, came up to him, they grabbed him and threw him down upon the sidewalk, where they went through his pockets, taking the money.

Tatro and Golden stood at Main and Portland streets and watched while the robbery was being committed.

After they got the money, Rogers says, they let him up, and all four ran down Portland street and disappeared.

MANY BLOWS CAUSED DEATH OF MIDSHIPMAN

Says Secretary Bonaparte, Who Has Been Called Upon by the President to Make a Report of the Fight.

Washington, Nov. 11.—The President has called upon Secretary Bonaparte for a report on certain features of the case of Midshipman Branch, who died at the naval academy at Annapolis after a glove fight with another midshipman, Admiral Sands, superintendent of the academy, has been directed to make a special report covering the specific matters upon which the president desires information.

Secretary Bonaparte yesterday conferred with Admiral Sands, when the facts developed in connection with the affair and the cause of action to be pursued was discussed.

It was stated that according to information before the department the indications were that the death of Midshipman Branch was caused by repeated blows on the head, and in the opinion of medical men it could not have been caused by a single blow.

Secretary Bonaparte said that the practice of fighting at the academy was objectionable, and would be discouraged.

THE FIGHTING CODE.

Version of Naval Academy Fight Which Resulted Fatally.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 11.—A statement, coming from within the naval academy, and believed to represent the midshipman's version of the fight between Midshipmen Meriwether and Branch and the death of the latter is as follows:

"The fight between Midshipmen Branch and Meriwether was because of personal dislike and trouble between the two midshipmen, which culminated in the latter personally insulting the former. Midshipman Branch did not report Meriwether for any violation of regulations, and he did not incur this fight because of discharging his duty. Midshipman Branch challenged Meriwether as the result of insulting remarks addressed to him by the latter, and it was decided that their differences be decided in the usual manly American fashion. In weight there was not a difference of over two pounds between the two. Both midshipmen were good physical specimens of manhood, Branch having at one time held the academy lightweight wrestling championship. Meriwether was not considered to be exceptionally well developed physically, as has been erroneously stated. The way of settling their personal difficulties may have been a mistaken one, but as far as can be said about an affair of this description, it was free from brutality and any unfairness, and the tragic ending is a most lamentable accident."

"At the conclusion of the fight, Midshipman Branch was able to walk to his room, and there conversed with his seconds for a time, afterward taking a shower bath and retiring. No fear of the result being tragic was felt until the next morning, when he was found to be unconscious."
"The code at the academy absolutely prohibits fighting over a report. Midshipmen on duty frequently have to exercise this authority for the maintenance of the state of discipline and it would be just as serious an offense against their code for the midshipmen so reported to challenge the one who made the report, as it would be for a University of Virginia student to offend against their code of honor by cheating at an examination."

MUST BE LINGUISTS.

Consular Service Applicants Are Worried by President.

Washington, Nov. 11.—With the double purpose of offering a permanent career in the diplomatic and consular service to competent young men and of improving those branches of the government service so as to make them more valuable than they are now to the business interests of the country, the president, at the instance of Secretary Root, yesterday announced two new rules.

The first of these has not yet taken concrete form, but its substance as made public was that hereafter any applicant for appointment as secretary of embassy or legation must possess a knowledge of at least one other language than English, and must be otherwise examined as to his competency.

This rule is closely in line with the English practice, and in its development will involve the promotion of the bright young men in the diplomatic service in the degree that they justify it by hard study fitting them for new posts.

The order as to the consular service amends the existing rule which requires the examination of such consular officers as are limited in compensation to the maximum of $2,500 per annum and a minimum of $1,000. The purpose of the president and Secretary Root is to take the consular service away from political preference and to make promotion as well as appointment depend entirely upon absolute merit.
